

The Next NASW-NJ FILM & CE Presentation Race To Nowhere

A screening of the film Race To Nowhere followed by facilitated discussion.

Race to Nowhere is a compelling and candid documentary about the complex issues facing our educational system and society as they relate to achievement and competition and the impact they have on students and their family life.

As social workers and parents, we have the responsibility of safeguarding children and teens' physical and mental health. The film's mission is to mobilize parents and educational systems to get involved in reducing the pressures on children and teens. The issues discussed in this film are found in many communities in Northern New Jersey.

Social Work Relevance: Topics to be discussed include: assessing the impact of "Race to Nowhere" on children, teens and families; identifying the life skills children and teens need to become healthy, productive, and independent young adults; identifying social work practices that help children and teens develop these skills; outline ways social workers can empower parents to help teens develop these skills.
